Heathcliff said he was stupid to walk across the moors in such bad weather.

(a) That he was not Heathcliff’s son, and this his name was Hareton Earnshaw. (b) That she was Heathcliff’s daughter-in-law.

He took Joseph’s lantern so he could see his way in the dark. Joseph sent two dogs after him and they pulled him to the ground.

Because she did not want Heathcliff to know that Lockwood was in the small bedroom. He did not like anyone to sleep there.

Some writing which was cut into the wood of a shelf and some old books.

He dreamt a tree branch was tapping against the window. He broke the glass of the window so that he could break off the branch. But he found that he had got hold of a small, cold hand, not a branch. A child’s voice said, ‘Let me in.’ The child said she was Catherine Linton. Lockwood dreamt that he pulled the hand against the broken glass and blood ran down onto the bed.

Heathcliff had put his head out of the window. Tears were pouring down his face. He was saying, ‘Cathy, come in.’

That she could never marry him and that she was going to marry Edgar Linton.

That she loved Heathcliff. She said that her soul and his were the same. But she thought that Heathcliff did not know about love.

She found out that Heathcliff had heard some of what she said and had disappeared. She stood out in the farmyard in a terrible storm. She got wet and cold, and she was very unhappy because Heathcliff had gone. She soon got a fever.

Because Edgar wanted her to live there when he married Cathy. And because Hindley told her she had to leave Wuthering Heights.

4 He felt that she was always near him, although he could not see her.
5 (a) Linton. (b) Heathcliff. (c) Heathcliff, Hareton and Catherine.
